THE IRVINGITES.

▲ Curious and Wealthy Religious Organiza-tion-A Church of Prophets. A London letter in the Cincinnati Commercial from M. D. Conway gives some interesting information respecting the present condition of the sect generally known as Irvingites-they call themselves the Catholic Apostolic Church. Edward Irving, the founder of the sect, was for many years an intimate friend of Thomas Car-He died in 1835. When he first went to London he became a popular pulpit orator of lyle. He died in 1835. When he first went to London he became a popular pulpit orator of the Scotch church, attracting large and most fashlonable congregations. In 1830, a servant girl in Scotland named Campbell began to discourse in a wild, incomprehensible way, and her hysterical ravings were declared to be a revival of the gift of tongues and of prophecy, while other manifestations of a like character occurred elsewhere, exciting much attention.

Edward Irving became a believer in the supernatural origin of these phenomena, and declared that the gift of tongues should have free course in his church, whereupon the Scotch church expelled him. His society then became a centre where the wildest scenes were witnessed. Irving himself frequently broke out in an insane gibberish, while outbreaks of supposed prophecy were heard from every part of the vast building in which he officiated.

Eventually the great society of enthusiasts who had collected around Irving, and a number of the same character elsewhere, convened in London and established seven churches on the idea of a strict and literal return to the forms and formulas of the apostolic age. Nominally there are but seven churches in the connection; in reality there are in Great Britain alone thirty societies, those outside of the original seven being termed branches. There are fifty churches in Germany, the most important being in Berlin, one in Paris, six in Scotland, two in Ireland, and two or three in this country. It is no small denomination which has grown up from a movement that most people in this country supposed had died out long age. Anong its members the Dukes of Northumberland have been and are stanch believers.

ment that most people in this country supposed had died out long ago. Among its members the Dukes of Northumberland have been and are starnch believers.

The Church at large has twelve apostles and seven angels; individual societies have deacons and deaconesses, elders, evangelists, and pastors, to say nothing of prophets, who are numerous, as any member of the Church may be moved to prophesy. The principal church of the Irvingites in London square, which was erected at a cost of $150,000, resembles a Catholic cathedral. There are five 6 othic windows flooding the cuneiform interior with many-hued lights, an altar, and several pulpits and lecternes, each with its robed occupant. On closer inspection one observes peculiarities. Each angel or officiant wears a robe of a peculiar color. The evangelist wears red at token of the blood of Christ, the pastor white temblem of purity), the angel purple and gold (purple meaning authority, and gold, truth), the elder purple, the prophet blue (for skyev influences, the heavenly mind, inspiration). These four primary colors represent the four-fold constitution of mannesson, imagination, will, affection. The majority of the robes are simple in structure, but the angel is quite gorgeous with his robes and an embroidered gold cross down his back.

There is considerable dramatic effect in the service. The words of the prayers, chants, &c., of the Sunday service resemble very much those of the Church of England. The same creeds are used, and the "Confession." "Absolution." "Gloria." and "Te Deum." with but very slight alterations. In the service of the Eacharist there are changes in the direction of Catholicism. The churches have two services on each of the week days, and these are in some respects the most characteristic. The first occurs at 6 o'clock in the morning, when the number of priests is about equal to that of the congregation. On this occasion the angel alone speaks (unless some one is moved to prophesy, which is always in order). It is his duty to give a tort of expo

ALDERMAN KOCH'S SNUFF BOX.

A Place in which the Auti-Liquor, Auti-Tobacco Men may Find a Home.

Alderman Falconer objects to both drinking and swearing, and generally carries in bis coat pocket a few temperance pledges, and in the pocket of his waistcoat cards bearing the words "Swear not at all." Alderman Koch is not an advocate of total abstinence, and always carries a box filled with Maccabov snuff.

A few days ago, after the adjournment of one of the stormy meetings of the Aldermen, the about the refusal of the combination to act on the Mayor's nominations. "Alderman, what the devil does it all mean?" asked Alderman Falconer. "What do you want to do?" "Mein Gott in Himmel. replied Alderman Koch, "don't you know what it means? It means that we don't want to act on the nomina-tions. We have no right to do so. The law is unconstitutional, and if we confirm the nomessembled in Gen. Pinckney's office, talking over the incidents of the meeting. While they were thus engaged, Alderman Koch drew from his pocket his snuff box, and first taking a pinch himself, passed it around among his collengues. Each City Father in turn took a pinch. But Alderman Falconer politely declined, saying, "I declare, Alderman, you will demoralize all the Aldermen with your Dutch snuff box." Then walking up and down the room, he discoursed on the evils of tobacco in any shape, and concluded by describing the Methodist farm at Sea Cliff, Long Island. "That is a place worth living in," said he, "for no liquor or tobacco can be got in the neighborhood. In all our leases and deeds of property we insert a condition that under no circumstances shall the lessee keep any liquor, wine, beer, or tobacco about his premises; and no man can live in that settlement who does not conform to that rule."

When the Alderman had finished his speech, Alderman Koch again offered him his snuff box, and said, laughing, "Now, Alderman, do try a little snuff. It will do you good."

Alderman Falconer again declined and went out of the roce."

INDEMNITY FOR BROKEN HEARTS.

this country; and they are consequently not of frequent occurrence. In the public estimation atory to the character of the woman and almost serting her. The plaintiff's own sex attribute to her an inherent want of delicacy, and the parade with any one. It is not strange, therefore, that in the United States juries are loth to find for the plaintiff, and generally bring in a verdict for In this country actions for breach of promise are brought by men almost as often as by

England and Ireland, where breach of promise cases abound, the plaintiffs are almost invariably women.

Juries, however, are very sympathetic in Great Britain; and the wounds of the broken-hearted one are often healed by a verdict for several hundred pounds. With us, it may be said, that circumstances of peculiar hardship only justify a woman in attempting to obtain a pecuniary satisfaction for the injury to her feelings; in Great Britain a very slight foundation for the alleged breach is sufficient to secure a favorable verdict.

This is well illustrated by a case recently tried at the Limerick Assizes in Ireland. The plaintiff, Catherine Murphy, is a good-looking young woman, and is the daughter of a tavern keeper. The defendant is a farmer, living in the locality of Abbeyleaic. He alleged that he had never promised to marry the plaintiff, and that he is under twenty-one years of age. He succeeded to the ownership of a mountain farm on his father's death, and seems to have been considered by the publican as a desirable young man. When stopping at the linn, on his way home, some two years since, the defendant was asked by Catherine's father if he had ever heard him say he had a daughter for him, and after this Mr. Murphy continued to talk about his daughter for some time.

Catherine swore that the defendant on one occasion asked her to marry him and kassed her; that he said: "Take care you don't marry any other young man," and she replied: "Mind you the same:" that afterward, in September, he repeated the promise, and said he would stick to his bargain. She told him that if she kissed any one else than himself the priest would kill her. On the 9th of January he came and began to complain that the fortune was too small, and that he had been advised not to carry out the singagement.

The promise was alleged to have been made in 1871, and plaintiff herself admitted she did not

The young man had never been a devoted lover, and it looked very much as if the whole case was an attempt to compel him to marry Catherine. This was shown by the evidence of a horse jockey, Moriarty, who said: "I remember the occasion on which the defendant was in the containtiff is public house. I asked him when was the big night to be, and the defendant said it would soon come off. He (Walsh) said he would have a good night before my horse was trained. [Laughter.] Cross-examined by Mr. Atkinson—Oh, you are a horse trainer? Yes, your honor. (Laughter.] And you wanted to get this unfortunate young man Walsh into the matrimonial yoke? [Laughter.] His Lordship—The single yoke, I suppose. [Laughter.] Cross-examination continued—You got him into harness, any way? We did, by gor. [Laughter.] Had you any drink the night the promise was made? We had, but it wasn't a night of it. [Laughter.]. The jury, notwithstanding, gave poor Katle a verdict for £40.

During this month we find several cases of this nature reported in England. In one case a dairy

The jury, notwithstanding, gave poor Katie a verdict for £40.

During this month we find several cases of this nature reported in England. In one case a dairy maid recovered £100 from a farmer and in another a farmer in Northampton had to pay £300 to the daughter of a neighbor.

A case tried before Justice Brett at the Newcastle Assizes was peculiar. It was an action against a retired draper, a widower with two married children, at Hexham, by a lady of forty five, defendant being sixty-two or sixty-three. In the first letter showing symptoms of breaking off the engagement, defendant wrote:

I have had a good deal of unpleantness since I saw you in the famley sircles, and it is a dayly dish from the publick, until I am hartley sick of it. They know every steps we have take since we commenced, and a good way into the future. And how, dear Aggie, do not let algry temper arise nor animosity prevail against me for this, for I shall always entertain a friendly fealing toward you and all famley, and when we meet each other may it be with a friendly fealing until we meet in heaven, where parting shall be no mor, amen, God bless you.

The jury awarded the plaintiff £500.

bless you."

The jury awarded the plaintiff £500.
In an action for breach of promise one of two motives must impel the plaintiff to seek such a satisfaction, cupidity or revenge. The former motive must influence women who are adventurers and whose hearts are voluntarily offered to any man foolish enough to be entangled. The latter revenge, or the wish to make the trifler atone by suffering, is what must induce women of a better nature to publish their woes. In either case woman is not presented in a flattering light; and it is much wiser to let the action fall into disuse.

A ROMANTIC CAREER.

The Errors of Youth Attoned for in Middle

A fault committed early in life often throws a shadow over all the after years; and the one false step-although atoned for by a long career of excellence-is wont sooner of later to bring a bitter retribution. This strange story, taken from the law reports of a late French newspaper, is a striking illustration of our remark :

our remark:

In the year 1855 Alfred Eripé, then only twenfour, was employed in the Department of the Seine Prefecture with a salary of 1,450 francs per annum. His father was an old taxpayer, and his family one of the most honorable. The young man had a mistress whose caprices he found it difficult to gratify on his slender salary. In December, in the holiday season, his evil genius overcame him, and he abstracted from the office an order for 3,435 francs, drawn in the name of M. Milcent, a dealer in cattle. He changed the date of this draft from Sept. 21, 1854, to the 6th of December, 1855, presented it for payment on the same day, and afterward, owing to the opportunity his official duties gave him, he succeeded in destroying it. In the same way he disposed of 72,000 francs in certificates, His extravagant mode of life awakened suspicion, and when questioned by the cashier he confessed his guilt, and restored 2,000 francs, the balance left of the amount embezzled.

He failed to appear on trial, and was condemned to ten years hard labor by the Seine Court of Assizes in July, 1859.

He obtained possession of registry of birth of one of his friends named Jules Victor Adolpe Lemaitre, whose name from thence forward he assumed. Armed with this document, he enisted in the army for seven years. He was incorporated in the Fourth Regiment of Hussars, in garrison at Mauberge, where his conduct was exemplary, but he deserted in April, 1859. Some time after the true Lemaitre was arrested as a deserter, when the deception of Eripé was brought to light. For this new offence our herowas condemned again by default in August, 1860, to an auditional term of ten years at hard labor.

Meanwhile he escaped arrest, and as at one time he had studied in the Louis-le-Grand lyceum, he succeeded in obtaining a place as professor has checked volume. In the year 1855 Alfred Eripé, then only twen-

Meanwhile he escaped arrest and as at one time he had studied in the Louis-le-Grand lyce-um, he succeeded in obtaining a place as professor in a school at Nogent l'Artauld.

In this new position he showed such intelligence and devotion to duty as to win general eateem. He became professor successively at Belleville, Gonesse, and Fère-en-Tardenois. He left in every place the best reputation. At length he settled down at Fismes where, after having given lessons for some time in a school, he became interested in the important sugar establishment of Goumont. During all this time he preserved the name of Lemaitre.

While at Fère-en-Tardenois in October, 1863, he married Mademoiselle Eugénie Coutant, whose parents had a certain amount of property. On this occasion he produced the birth registry of Lemaitre, and the marriage certificate of his old friend's parents, and affirmed under oath before a justice of the peace that he was ignorant of their place of decease or of their last domicil. He lost his wife in March, 1868, and three months later he contracted a new marriage with Mademoiselle Helen Fagnon of Fismes, who brought a downy of 500 francs.

At Fismes he continued to enjoy the confidence of his patron, and was considered one of the most worthy citizens of the place, when on the lath of last February the genuine Lemaitre, who is an engineer on the fastern felliver.

identity—he made a complaint against his old comrade.

The trial recently took place at the Assizes Court of the Seine. M. Lachaud defended the accused with fervent eloquence. He recounted in detail the career of his client, who had labored all his life to efface his first fault, and who, at the moment when the twenty years of imprisonment to which he had been condemned had almost run out, had been vanquished. In the midst of a general emotion the jury acquitted the prisoner. His wife, the family of his first wife, his patron, and a host of his friends were present. The announcement of the verdict was greeted with applause, and the accused was surrounded by his friends, who congratulated him.

Had the jury been less sensible or humane and found Empé guilty, he would have been cast into prison and disgraced forever. His young wife would have been sorrow stricken. And all would have been of no benefit, for as the object of punishment is not vindictive, but rather to make reparation or to serve as a deterrent, it would have done no good to punish Eripe at this late day for his youthful offence.
